

Angelic Transmission 2

Received by Mary Gabrielle

March 9, 2021

Greetings, Mary. We are glad you have come to us once again. We are here to receive you and are in your service.

Mary: I have a question about the “name” I received that might describe you as a collective. Angelic Technologies Inc. or Angel Tech. Was that a joke or am I to take that seriously?

AT: It carries humor as we intended, however, it also is an apt name for those of us in this collective who here to share information with you so that you in turn can share it with others.

Mary: Thank you, I will refer to you by using that name for the time being. I am here to gain additional information about angels with regards to how we, as earth humans, should think of them. I have been studying the Books of Enoch, and as I hear more of the stories about the origins of “angels,” “demons,” “nephilim,” “the watchers,” and “fallen angels,” I become more confused. Many of the writings suggest much more “human” characteristics and flaws than they suggest divinity or advanced soul energies.

AT: We have been answering you each and every time you send questioning energy in our direction, so many of your thoughts about this are already accurate from our point of view. We are a collective attempting to share the truth about angelic and demonic realms with you so that the energies and connections available to you and other humans will be better understood. Therefore, we are not necessarily classified as “angels” ourselves, at least as you would interpret that class of beings. We are teachers who stand as mentors and guides to you and your species. And we do have access to additional insights regarding the classification of angels and their technologies that we can share with you for your edification and advancement.

Mary: Thank you, please continue.

AT: Therefore, as you research these beings or this topic, you are already receiving answers through your connection to us that was established at a previous time. We have been accessible to you ever since we heard your call for information many months ago. Your feelings about such matters along with your thoughts and intuition have already received many etheric messages from us.

Mary: I do not feel that those beings described in the Books of Enoch and other biblical texts represent the godly characteristics I can identify with. They seem to be jealous, power hungry, and vague in their explanations when it comes to defining rules for the humans and/or the angels. For example, I am having a difficult time understanding why angels would be punished for sharing important knowledge with humans, including healing, magic, herbal, and other helpful information. As I see it, this knowledge benefits humans and yet, those angels were cast out and are now considered demons. This is just one of the confusions I have regarding these stories.

AT: We understand your confusion, and we know that you are already coming to understand the truth regarding this situation, but we will attempt to explain more. You must remember that the stories you are referring to were largely written by a certain group of people who were witnessing events according to their perceptions and spiritual evolution at the time.

Many of the texts you will have access to, have been altered or were originally written by those with pre-conceived notions on how the events should be recorded for posterity. The narratives that you are familiar with have been designed to reinforce an entire archive of historical perspective. Your creators, those that were largely in charge of creating the earth human race under the auspices and authority of a higher source, formed the boundaries of your existence as a collective. Just as they created your earth body forms, so too did they create the stories of your origins and the frameworks of your belief structures.

In order to be effective as stewards, your creators established their authority over you. It is wise to keep in mind that you were a young species and did require guidelines for your advancement. As is the case in many creative alliances, rules are established for the alliance creations until they are ready for more sovereignty and evolution. However, each creative alliance has the ability to endow their creations with rules and belief structures according to their preference. In the case of earth humans, your creators chose to remain as authoritative entities and overseers.

The energy that aligns with the establishment of this blanket of authority has led your species to form world views according to similar, hierarchal structures. Most stories and narratives that come to you through “divine” hands or biblical teachers will also carry the energy of an authority structure as though that is the singular and best belief system to adhere to. In actuality, it is only one structure and is by no means superior to other options. It is merely the one that has been given to the earth-human as a template for governance.

As for those that consider themselves your creators and therefore your stewards, they are not what you might perceive if you wish to consider them on the same level as the highest creative source, the one that you might refer to as “God.” They are many kingdoms apart from such a level, and yet, they are far more technologically advanced than your own species. They are aware of their place in the order of kingdoms. They also come from authoritative structures, and so, they have passed the energy of these systems on to you. They revere the highest creator as many of your people do, and they have strived to emulate a system of rules, leadership, and hierarchy that they believe will serve you best.

However, when you perceive some of their childlike traits, you are correct. They are not yet advanced into the highest of orders of kingdoms and therefore, have many characteristics that have not yet evolved into the highest orders of states of being. They are also a species that is evolving and, while they are more advanced than you, they are on their own journey of evolution. It is also important to remember that those writing and translating the texts you have access to are interpreting messages they receive through the lenses of the preset template of authority and that type of structure.

Members of your creative alliance are emotional and have many of the same traits as their creations do. This is common for all creative alliances and is not necessarily to be considered a flaw or weakness. As creative alliances advance, so do their creations. The marks of the maker do appear in the creations of the maker. This is a natural, spiritual law that underlies all creative sciences. The maker draws forth characteristics that are familiar and inheritable in order to infuse the creations with resonant life and distinct attributes.

What we will call “angels,” exist in all orders and kingdoms with the original orders of such beings existing on the highest planes of creation. On the highest plane, angels serve the Creator in specific callings and functions. These roles can be imitated and emulated at other levels of existence. In most cases, those that choose to represent themselves as angels on behalf of their correlating kingdoms, access and maintain the same energy signatures as those who serve in the highest planes. They have access to those laws of creation that we refer to as “angel technology.” We use this term so that you will understand that angelic work is complex and comprehensive and is much like the technology you are familiar with in your dimension.

We wish to be clear that these beings are not representing themselves as “false” angels. Rather, they are willing to serve as all angels do, utilizing certain technology and performing unique functions defined by the archetype of their role in the overall process of creation. They qualify as being able to refer to themselves as “angels,” but they are still in the position of evolution themselves and require access to the Angels of the highest orders in order to carry out their duties, callings, and functions.

In the case of those angelic beings associated with your earthly era now unfolding, there is much misunderstanding. This is why we are willing to share our understanding with you. We wish to be of service and to help you and your species come to a better understanding of who and what you are accessing when you call upon angels for assistance, either through magical means or through spiritual traditions. Once again, these beings you can call by specific names do serve you in the role assigned to all angels, they do access angelic technologies, and they are resonant conduits to the higher powers and functions of the Angels of the highest orders; but they are still on their own paths of progression and may still exhibit limitations.

When you read of the angels in the ancient texts, it will be helpful for you to put their class of beings in perspective. They are those who elected to accept the role, calling, and function of angels for your species and plane of existence. They are still in a state of progression themselves. While they are far more advanced than most of your species, they are not yet in a state of perfection or absolute divinity. When they accept their role as one of your dimensional angels, they are taking a vow to uphold and maintain the rules and orders associated with their position. It is possible to break these vows and cause disruptions in the creative orders set up by the respective creative alliance. When this happens, each creative alliance will choose how to handle such events according to their laws, ordinances, and creative structures.

When you read of the “fallen angels,” and their offspring, the “Nephilim,” you are hearing about a divergence from the guidelines set up for angels serving your dimension and the resulting consequences. However, you are receiving the information through the eyes and ears of those who have been entrained into an authoritative system of obedience and hierarchy. Both your creative alliance as well as those who wrote the histories are reporting and interpreting the events through the lens of an authoritarian system. It is indeed true that some who were called as angels broke the rules associated with their calling. But it is possible to look at this through another type of lens, one of objectivity rather than through a subjective and authoritative value assessment.

We will attempt to demonstrate a more objective viewpoint. When some who were called to serve as angels broke the established boundaries that were laid down for them by your creative alliance, they violated natural laws as well as structural restrictions. In the case you are referring to, we see a serious violation regarding creation itself as those that “rebelled” chose to mix with the earth human in order to procreate. This was forbidden as it was unknown what such a mixture of genetic code would bring into existence. You might see this as something akin to an enforced precaution based on genetic sciences. We see these types of violations occurring in your realm to this very day as many still attempt to merge different species without the lawful support or understanding of divine creative science.

While on the surface, this type of violation may not be aligned with some sort of “sinful” intention, it can bring consequences that destroy the natural, intended evolution of the species. Therefore, it is the result of such a rebellion that creates destruction and chaos rather than the rebellion itself. We can think of this violation as one without harmful intention but still threatens the equilibrium necessary to maintain a designated course of evolution. Therefore, this type of rebellion can be seen as punishable according to the consequences that arise from violating natural laws.

In the texts you refer to, a negative consequence did occur as a result of angels mating with humans. They produced a hybrid species which you call the “Nephilim.” This species was not properly attuned to the natural laws that would sustain the earth human, nor did they carry the genetic material necessary to emulate their angelic parentage. This consequence produced the need for a countering action. In the case you refer to, your creative alliance chose to end the lives of all who were affected by the angels’ actions. This was intended to clear and erase the energetic fields associated with that hybrid species so that it could no longer affect the future progression of the earth-human race.

Some of their other violations, which you have mentioned, were more in line with violations against legal structures than against nature itself. In this case, your creative alliance had a structure in place that was designed to guide your progression as a species according to their plans and desires. When angels broke away from those guidelines and shared forbidden information with humans, it was deemed a violation of the laws set forth by the stewards of your race.

This may cause some moral dilemma as it can seem honorable that those angels were willing to share the secrets of your “gods” with you in order to help you progress faster. However, that behavior demonstrates a breach of trust that occurred between those in service to your stewards and the stewards themselves. This is also considered a punishable offense and resembles the energy associated with military orders in your dimension. Some orders might go against common morality but are expected to be obeyed for the sake of preserving the goals of the overall structure.

Once again, we will attempt to relate this part of the narrative with a more objective outlook. While there is no doubt that some of those who rebelled have succumbed to a steady decline in their evolution and perhaps have chosen to follow dark paths offered to them by others, many have not accepted such offers and will continue to evolve as angels. However, it is true that their evolution has been slowed and will take a different course than the one originally designed for them as they would no longer resonate to the original path.

Those that no longer choose to evolve as angels have aligned themselves fully with the energetic patterns of rebellion and resistance. This alignment leads to even deeper attunements to energies such as revenge, destruction, and decay. These are those beings who may be called “demons” by some. Unfortunately, this type of entity exists in every form as it is a natural consequence of free will and natural species evolution. It is not limited to those you refer to as “angels.” Each species, each race, and each calling and function produces some who choose this path until a turning point occurs for them. At certain points, some of these entities may choose to realign with their original evolutionary path and begin a more positive cycle of existence.

Those demons most reviled and named by your prophets and seers as the most evil are those who have chosen to walk the paths that lead directly away from any type of healthy evolution. However, it's important to note that many of these entities were coaxed and tempted onto their current paths by other negative beings who were already part of your multidimensional reality. In other words, their initial rebellion was only part of the reason they now find themselves in such dire and bleak circumstances. Some of their brethren chose to rebuild their fates, while those who continue to fall have allowed themselves to become fully resonant with entropic forces of destruction.

Through this explanation, you can see that the stories that relate to the angels and demons known to you is not as clear cut as it might appear through reading ancient texts. It is a complex paradigm that requires much deeper insight, an insight that is not available to most of the earth-humans at this time.

Now, we would like to address the issues pertaining to your trust in such beings you know as the “angels” and how you might move forward with regards to calling upon them for assistance, support, healing, or inspiration. As you might perceive from our explanations thus far, some adjustment in your thinking might need to take place in order to work successfully with these beings. Perhaps they are not exactly as you perceived them to be, and if so, it will be necessary to realign your expectations with the truth about their existence, purpose, and abilities.

We can assure you that Angels of the Highest order do exist both as original archetypes and as functioning entities who carry out their missions and resonate to their assigned roles as extensions of the One Creative Source. All “angel technologies,” as we might call them, emanate from these beings and from the natural forces that created, define and sustain them. They are able to extend their knowledge, spirit, technologies, and powers throughout all angelic systems that function and exist throughout all dimensions.

Therefore, it is generally safe to approach one of your dimension’s angels through naming, calling, or requesting assistance. In most cases, you will reach the energy signature of the angel governing your domain as a qualified representative of the Angel of the Highest Kingdoms. The names of the angels and demons known to you have been assigned to them and given to you through revelation and inspiration. While some names are not entirely accurate, they are designed to encompass the sound technologies necessary to open a portal to angelic energy systems. This is why it is not advised to say their names without consideration. Each name holds the original “sound bearer” technology associated with the tasks of that angel. The “sound-bearer” label is a reference to an angelic technology that we spoke of in a prior communication with you.

In the case of those “angels” who have fallen from their original path, it is not generally recommended to use their names or call on them for assistance. The sounds and tones of their names, originally designed for positive growth and evolution, are now contaminated by the energies they are currently resonating to. In some cases, one who is well-versed in the studies of demonology may be able to successfully work with beings who have been wrongly accused of falling from their path. Those beings would still be considered demons by those who are not informed, but they may actually be striving to regain their original status and be willing to assist humans as a result of their positive intentions. However, this is a level of discernment and knowledge that is very rare and not a necessary tool for most magical or spiritual practitioners.

If you should choose to call out or utter the names of angels as you continue to follow your own magical path, we advise that you use the names of those who have been called on for many generations by masters of magick and spirit. Those who have gone before you have compiled information about these beings and can offer reliable guidelines for those who choose to follow in their footsteps.

Use your own discernment, of course, but it is generally safe to rely on the historical accounts pertaining to what each angel’s energy represents and for what reasons that angel may be called upon to assist. Those that have maintained their angelic positions under the guidance of your creative alliance are serving in positions of allegiance to you as a species. They are your conduits to the Angels on High and all the technology that goes with that calling and function. They can provide you with access to information and tools that will assist you with your personal and collective evolution should you choose to call upon them in that capacity. They must regard the laws of free will set forth by the Creative Source, and so it is necessary that you ask for their intervention or assistance before they can offer such services.
