Transcribed Directly from the Angel Sariel:

All is not as it seems. Just as I have taught so many of you about the moon that dwells within your heavens, so it is that the sphere still remains a shrouded mystery unto you, for it is not what you believe it to be. Heed this warning if you are able to hear my words.

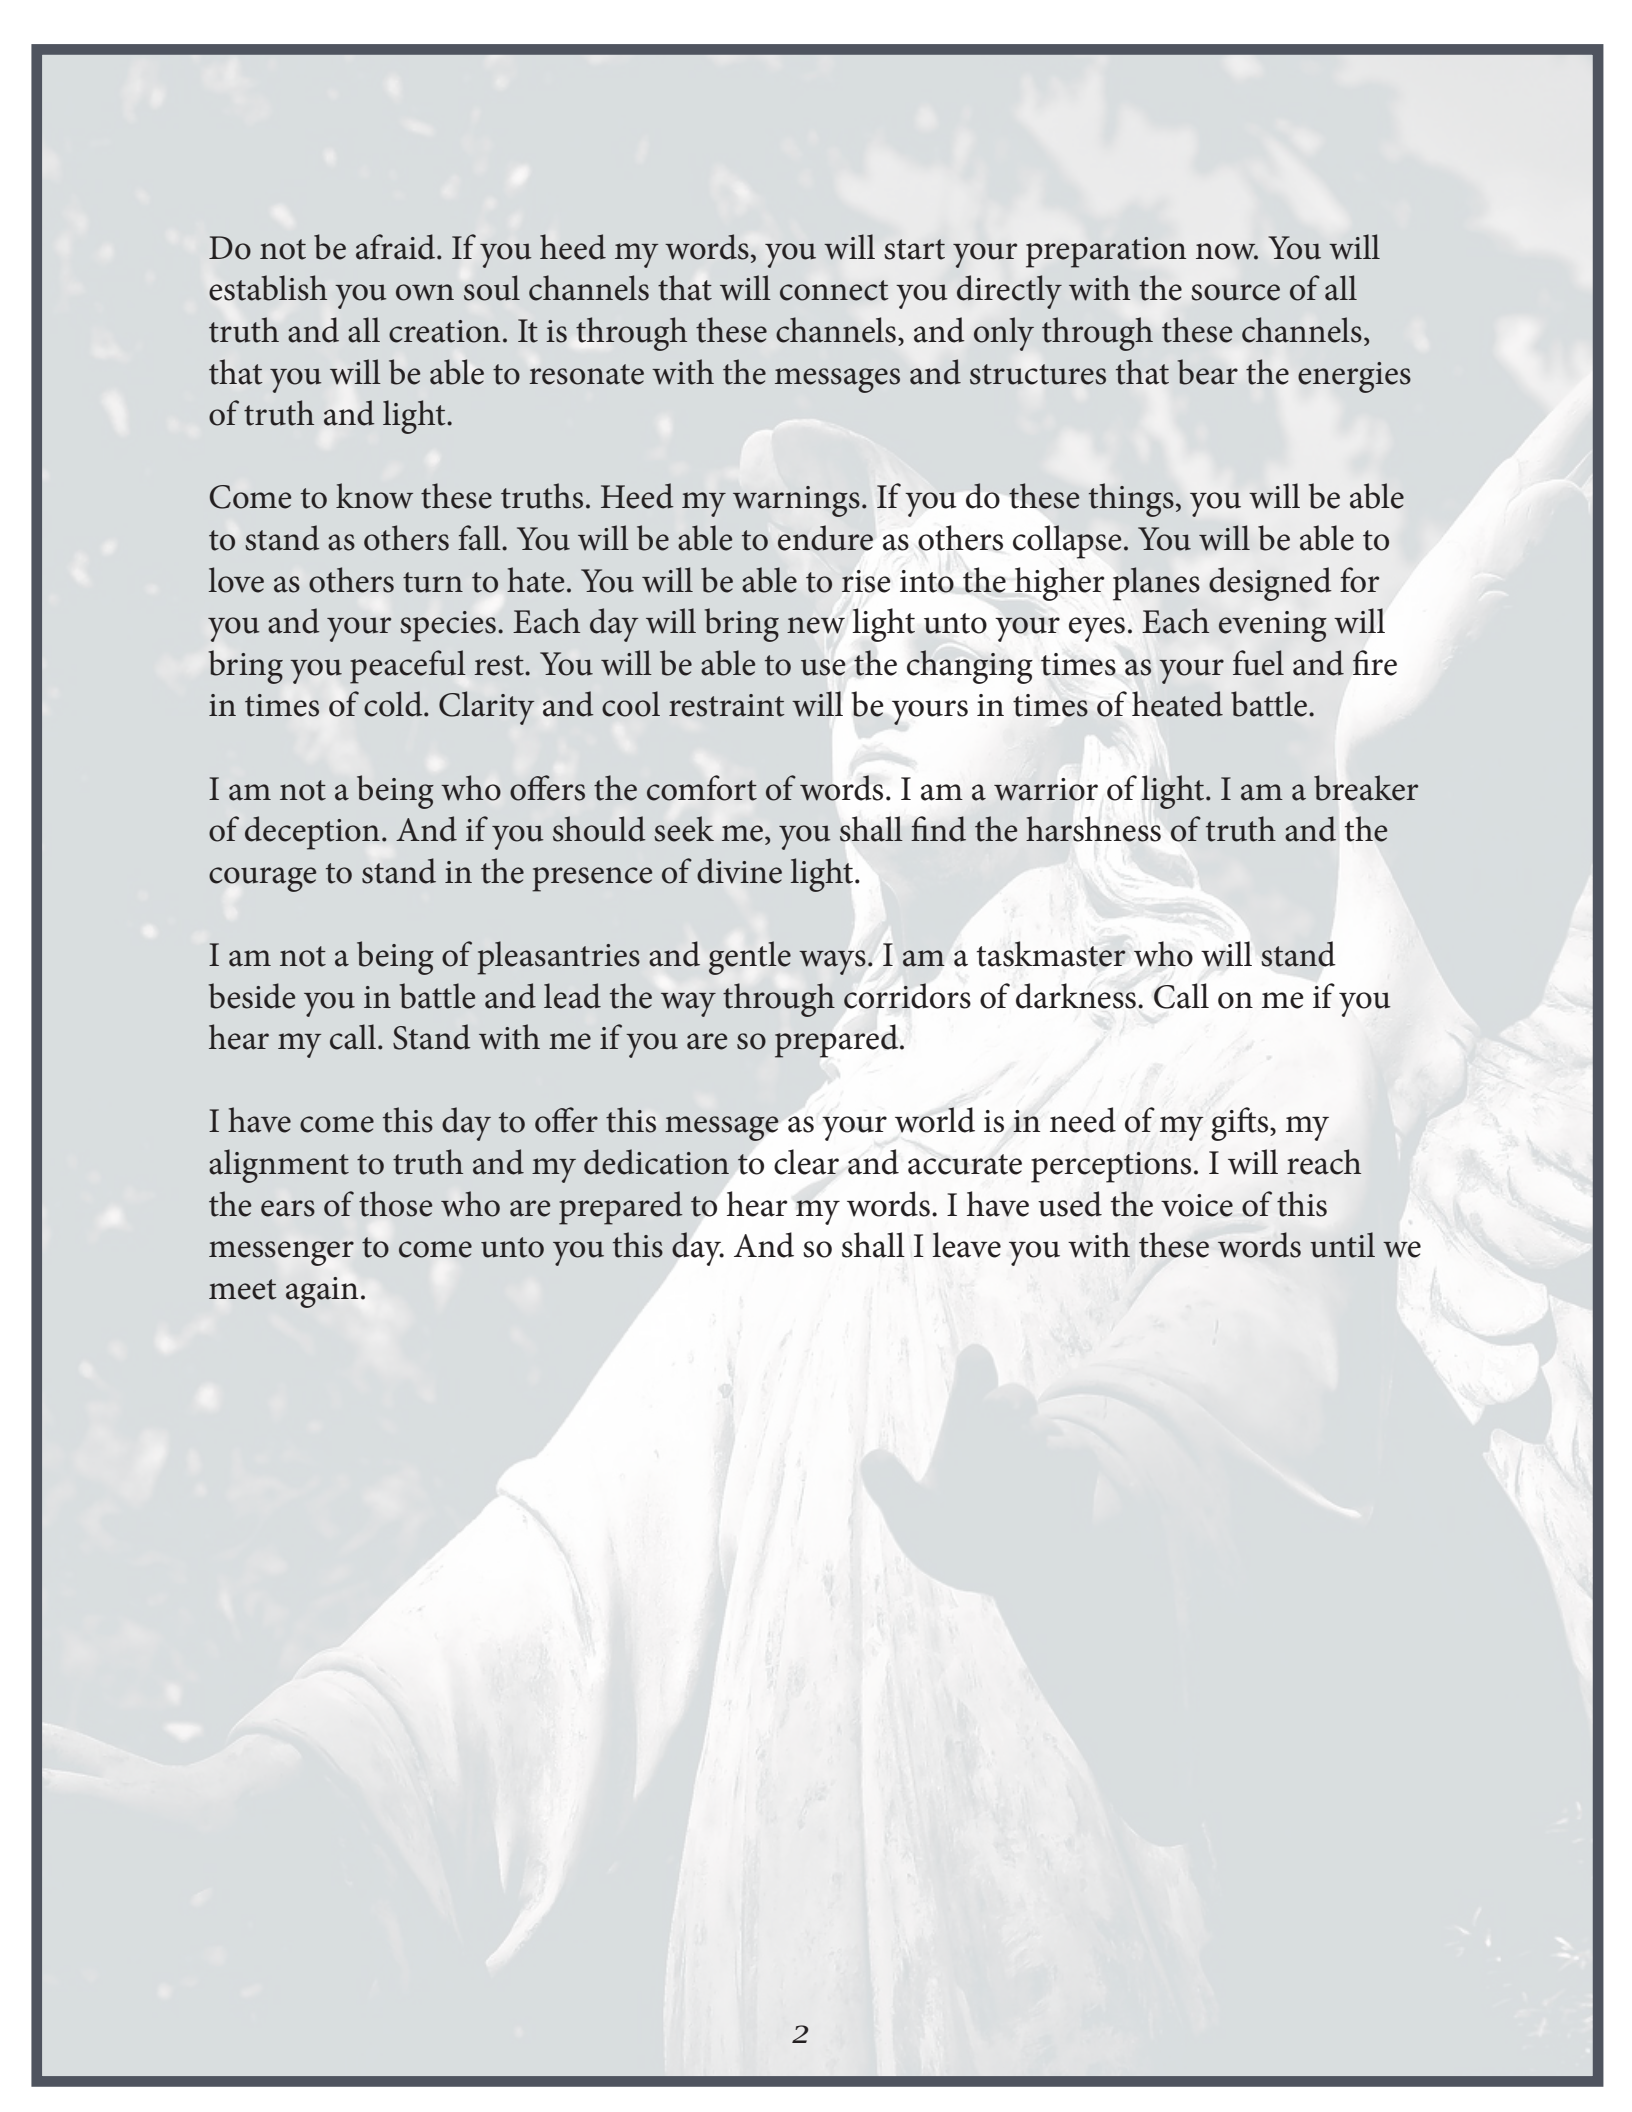

The beliefs you hold so dear are much like the changing faces of the moon itself. When light is shone on the representations of those beliefs, they appear different than when those symbols dwell in darkness.

Beyond the two faces of light and dark there are concepts of hollow and solid. Some things that appear solid are not so, and some that appear hollow are saturated with etheric constructs invisible to your human eyes. Each and every thought, each and every point of creation holds these energies of light and dark, hollow and solid. Only holistic vision can comprehend the true nature of your reality.

Now is the time for the earth human to understand the relevance of such things. For some, I am an angel of light, for others, I am one who has fallen. It is for you to learn the truth about me and my existence. Your world is caught between the sharp edges of truth and deception. Most of your kind are caught between the light of day and the dark of night. Shadows have been sent to confuse you. They too are not what they seem.

The task for today is to release your grasp on structures that appear solid to you, for in most cases, they are not. With these false representations, you are holding on to counterfeit frameworks and mere shadows. These structures that entreat you to cling onto their shiny surfaces are illusory in nature. They are based on archetypes that you know well just so they can attract and retain your attention and your allegiance. But they are not what they seem to be.

It is only your soul that can lead you to the truth of all nature. Only the sounds of your soul can align you with the positive path of evolution. In the coming days of your realm, many structures and systems that you have grown accustomed to will fail and flounder. This is lawful and part of your rightful future.

Do not be afraid. If you heed my words, you will start your preparation now. You will establish your own soul channels that will connect you directly with the source of all truth and all creation. It is through these channels, and only through these channels, that you will be able to resonate with the messages and structures that bear the energies of truth and light.

Come to know these truths. Heed my warnings. If you do these things, you will be able to stand as others fall. You will be able to endure as others collapse. You will be able to love as others turn to hate. You will be able to rise into the higher planes designed for you and your species. Each day will bring new light unto your eyes. Each evening will bring you peaceful rest. You will be able to use the changing times as your fuel and fire in times of cold. Clarity and cool restraint will be yours in times of heated battle.

I am not a being who offers the comfort of words. I am a warrior of light. I am a breaker of deception. And if you should seek me, you shall find the harshness of truth and the courage to stand in the presence of divine light.

I am not a being of pleasantries and gentle ways. I am a taskmaster who will stand beside you in battle and lead the way through corridors of darkness. Call on me if you hear my call. Stand with me if you are so prepared.

I have come this day to offer this message as your world is in need of my gifts, my alignment to truth and my dedication to clear and accurate perceptions. I will reach the ears of those who are prepared to hear my words. I have used the voice of this messenger to come unto you this day. And so shall I leave you with these words until we meet again.
